Computer

Boardgame Classic now available on TRS-80® I, III & IV!

Computer Diplomacy is the computer version of the classic boardgame of persuasion, compromise and betraval. Against a backdrop of Imperial Europe, Computer Diplomacy uses a minimum of game mechanics and a maximum of intimidation (and back stabbing) to create a game of exciting international intrigue where each player tries to arrange the deals and alliances that will lead him to ultimate victory. The result is a game of pure diplomacy, a balance between the trust needed to deal and the profitable stab in the back that leaves the betrayer friendless.

The player is free to scroll the map. Provinces and seas are shown by three letter codes. Supply centers are marked by asterisks (*).

Initials of a power within a province signifies ownership. Symbols indicate a fleet () or army ().

For years, the board game version of Diplomacy has been regarded as a true classic in the world of gaming. Even professional diplomats, including no less a celebrity than Henry Kissinger, have enjoyed its accuracy and intensity. However, for years it has also been noticed that the game had one flaw: by far the best version of the game required seven players, a sometimes hard-to-get number.

But now there is Computer Diplomacy where six or less players can compete and the computer resolves the moves of the other nations. Admittedly the computer isn't always as devious as a human, but it is treacherous enough to make play vastly more enjoyable for six or less players. In fact, it's fun for a single player to take one nation and try to conquer the map (though this certainly cannot be termed "diplomacy").

Of course, Computer Diplomacy also has all of the amenities you expect in a computer game: a detailed scrolling map that displays the location and type of all units, various status reports and even a built-in clock that times each "diplomacy period". The computer also takes care of game mechanics: you simply enter your moves and the computer swiftly resolves all conflicts, prompts you when to take the action and explains why a move failed.

So, if Diplomacy is a classic, what is Computer Diplomacy?! We'll be humble and just say it's still a classic — but not just for seven anymore.

Computer Diplomacy is available on diskette for your TRS-80 Models I, III and IV with 48K memory at $30.00. Diskette soon to be available for the IBM-PC®.
