TO OUR FOREIGN CUSTOMERS

Most visitors to the Persian Empire art overwhelmed (and overcharged) by the vast bartering establishments of the land. However, haggling with local merchants can be both safe and easy using the Empire's official bargaining procedure developed by Hosni Haake, entrepreneur and the King's personal economist. First, get the merchant's attention by talking to him. Example: "Talk to Hosni." Secondly, tell the merchant what it is that ye wish to buy. Example: "Buy the Yak." Lastly, tell the merchant what ye art willing to pay for the item. Example: "Offer 75." If this price is unacceptable to him, he shalt counter with a different price. Then offer him a new amount, until both of thee art satisfied.

When using thy Darics, ye may use commands such as "Bribe guard with 20 Darics"; or simply, "Bribe guard with 20."
