

How did you, a regular at Joe's Bar in Upper Sandusky, Ohio, end up on a Martian moon? You've been kidnapped by minions of the fiendish Leather Goddesses of Phobos, who are plotting to turn the Earth into their private pleasure palace! If you succeed in escaping their clutches, you'll begin a naughty, bawdy, and very, very amusing romp across the solar system. Your mission is to collect the materials you'll need to defeat the Leather Goddesses and save humanity from their dastardly plan.

Leather Goddesses of Phobos is the first interactive story that satisfies all your senses, providing you with everything from a scratch 'n' sniff card to a 3-D comic book and 3-D glasses. To make sure everyone gets in on the fun, there are male and female playing modes and three different "naughtiness" levels—Tame, Suggestive, and Lewd.

If you can imagine stepping into the shoes of the main character in your favorite novel, then you've got an idea of what it's like to step into Infocom's interactive fiction. Leather Goddesses of Phobos lets you play the hero in a hilarious spoof of 1930's pulp science fiction. Challenging puzzles and outrageous adventures go hand in hand as author Steve Meretzky's zany sense of humor keeps the story moving from one rollicking rendezvous to the next.
